

Navigating security risk in the nonprofit world

Risk is higher than ever before.

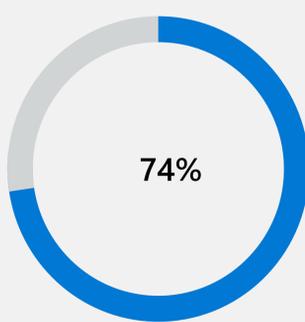

- Malicious digital attacks
- Unsecure data
- Ability to articulate your security position to donors and partners
- Most nonprofits lag behind for-profit orgs in security despite facing the same risks
- No nonprofit-specific standard for cybersecurity management

Breaches can put your organization and its beneficiaries at risk, disrupt your operations, increase liability, and tarnish your reputation.

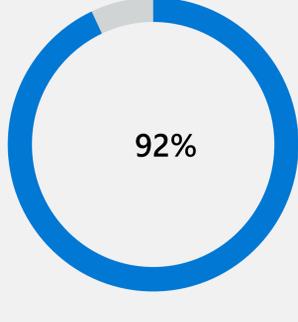

60 percent of nonprofits surveyed don't have or know of a policy to articulate their approaches to cybersecurity risk, equipment usage, and data privacy.<sup>1</sup>

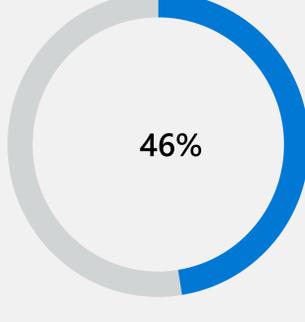

74 percent of nonprofits surveyed don't use multifactor authentication.<sup>1</sup>

Mitigating risk is not easy. You lack the budget, staff, and time to implement cybersecurity and privacy protections.

92% of nonprofits surveyed allowed staff to access organizational email and files on personal devices. The rest prohibited it, but said staff did it anyway.<sup>1</sup>

46% of nonprofits surveyed regularly used unsecured wireless printers, webcams, and other Bluetooth and wireless devices.<sup>1</sup>

Steps you can take.

- 01 Be aware of privacy issues and concerns.
- 02 Know the laws and regulations.
- 03 Identify risks and help protect against them.
- 04 Detect and respond to incidents.
- 05 Recover and learn from incidents.
- 06 Implement specific, high-value security controls.

The right technology can help.
