Industry trends

The digitisation of our everyday lives is shaping demands on wealth management providers. Robo-advisors are fast building a market servicing mass-affluent investors.

Yet we are still waiting for a material shift in wealth manager operating models to optimise digitisation.

Legacy infrastructure, regulatory reform, and shareholder demands all pose powerful barriers to investing in the capabilities needed to compete in a market facing accelerated levels of change.

Outsourcing investment management technology to specialist providers has become the most viable alternative to remain competitive and grasp the attention of the digital savvy investor.

Saxo's response

We believe that technology will profoundly change the asset management industry and access to technology, demand for transparency, and focus on performance will change the way individuals manage their savings.

By combining our unique trading technology with 3rd party expertise in investment management, SelectTech is a strong alternative to more traditional asset management solutions at a very competitive price.

Our Select engine enables incumbents and entrants to create robo-advisory client experiences at the level their clients have come to expect with greater cost effectiveness, greater agility, and more flexibility than previously possible.
