Telecom services represent one of the five largest expenses of most enterprises.

This is a problem for many as more than 50% of large enterprises don't accurately know how much they are spending on telecom-related services, due to:

- The complexity and variety of new telco services (Voice/Data Plans, Cloud, IOT, etc)
- The approved limits between personal and professional spends are blurred (BYOD)
- Companies are expanding and in each country, they have to deal with local costs and invoices. It is not easy to get a global view.

Clarity is a module within our Prisma managed service platform that provides the industry's most comprehensive telecom expense, cost allocation, procurement and inventory management tool that identifies changes in real time keeping your physical and digital ICT asset register correct at all times.

Clarity proposition gives you:

- More control through our services, with customized reports that can give you real info about your telco costs
- We can integrate invoices coming from most of the telcos
- Ability to choose the model you need: From a totally managed service to a self-managed service, where your employees can analyze their costs and perform basic MDM actions.

This allows you to achieve the following objectives:

- To reduce complexity and increase operational efficiency
- To cut costs thanks to that control.

More than 50 percent of large enterprises don't know what they are spending on telecom-related services across the company.
