

Has been working with Naris for 7 years. They have the Risk Management module and their entire insurance portfolio is also included in the Naris system. The modules have been rolled out across 22 countries. The most recent negotiations relate to the integration of Power BI. In 2017, Médecins Sans Frontières Netherlands had 297 million turnover.

“Thanks to the cooperation with Naris, a large amount of money reserves has been restored, which has resulted in many financial sources being released.”

Thijs van Buuren, controller at Médecins Sans Frontières Netherlands

There is a gain to be made when writing down, systematizing and classifying risks. Three classifications were distinguished: financial impact, possible impact on objectives and possible impact on reputation. Then the risks were made clear to everyone. Médecins Sans Frontières Netherlands works with their own people, their own teams and they are always on site. Being on site is essential in terms of risk management, it is the best guarantee for determining the safety of employees, and getting a clear picture of what is going on.

Sensus & Naris

Last year, process management specialist Sensus method and risk management specialist Naris announced that they were joining forces. Together, the two companies offer a total solution with which corporations have more control and insight into the risks and control measures within their organization.

The gas union was looking for a course that was fully in line with the risk management objectives set by the management. The Gas Union opted for Naris's in-company training program

“Risk management should help us in making strategic decisions and in dealing with external changes. This does not involve more lists and management measures. It is about looking for the right conversations, organizing contradictions, preventing management bias and so on.”

Wouter Schram, Manager Operational Audit and Corporate Risk Management at Gasunie.

The municipality of Deventer struggled with the agenda setting of many stakeholders. To realize this ambition, managers and employees have drawn up a strategy map together with Naris. This shows the most important goals, activities and the associated risks.

“The strategy map provided overview, clarity, insight and enthusiasm. And the departments learned to reinforce each other. Together they help the municipality of Deventer to stay on the right track.”

Simon Borst, Adjunct directeur Sociale agenda at the municipality of Deventer
