

Financial Services Cloud Readiness

A workshop to assess your business goals and drivers around cloud adoption and assess your readiness.

Financial Services firms are looking more and more for the latest digital transformation technology and cloud services to modernise and grow in line with their competitors. Whether they are established financial businesses with more complex technology needs or start-ups seeking a pure Microsoft public-cloud solution, Lanware can help plan the next steps.

What does the workshop involve?

In this workshop, we will look at your current business strategy and your existing use of cloud technology as well as your current state of readiness from both an application and infrastructure perspective. The objective will be to identify your target operating model and provide a easy to digest report to help build and present a business case to help your digital journey.

Lanware is one of the few players in the market who is offering this service purely tailored to the needs of financial firms. As well as all the relevant skills and experience in core Microsoft cloud technologies, Lanware benefits from a deep understanding of the financial services ecosystem and its application vendors. With this focus, it has built a cloud adoption methodology tailored to organisations operating in Financial Services.
