What is iyarn?

iyarn's vision is to create deeper and more meaningful connections to help people succeed. This is done through quick and easy check ins. An iyarn check in takes only 30 seconds to complete and gives you insights and meaningful data to gather feedback, monitor wellbeing, and facilitate meaningful conversations.

Check in data gives you clear visual insights of the influential 'segments' of an individual's life– from work and skills to sleep and health, iyarn gives you a holistic understanding of how individuals are travelling, so you can best help them progress.

With iyarn, individuals are encouraged to take time to reflect on where they're at, see their own progress, and make goals to improve. It creates a safe space where people can be vulnerable and share both their success stories and challenges in an easy way.

The greater connection and understanding you gain through iyarn, will help you improve and personalise your service delivery. What gets measured improves, and iyarn is here to help you monitor and track the progress in a way that will showcase your value and success.

Revolutionising the Road Ahead Wunan Foundation

A Kununurra-based Aboriginal organisation, Wunan Foundation, is checking in on their driver participants aimed at providing culturally appropriate driver training education to help individuals obtain or attain their driver's licence.

Michelle Bailey - Corporate Services General Manager

"At Wunan Foundation we believe having good social and emotional wellbeing can greatly benefit individuals when obtaining a drivers license. That's why we joined forces with iyarn, whose ethos is to enable purposeful social and emotional wellbeing check ins, and provide a safe place where individuals can flourish at any activity."

Hobart Employment Centre - The Van Diemen Project

iyarn has been used by the VDP team in Tasmania since 2020 and been featured by Jobs Australia as top performing employment centre for their consistent and reliable data collection.

Internally, the iyarn platform is used as a diagnostic tool. Every single week before the weekly meeting everyone will get the notification on their devices to do an iyarn check in. The check in is used as a starting point to see where things are at and how the work is going. Everyone's results are then displayed on the screen for everyone to see.

VDP CEO, Adam Mostogl, credits the ease of data collection from iyarn as being a core part to the program's success.

Skill Hire - National Training and Employment Provider

Skill Hire has been using iyarn to check in on their apprentices for the 18 months.

"[iyarn] is a way to get more clarity on what's happening in [the apprentice's] world...they might want to talk about it, but they're not sure about how to start that conversation with the career coaches. It's a safe and easy way to open up that conversation about it with them and gives participants a place to say if they aren't feeling very confident or safe." - Transition to Work Business Manager- Great Southern

Skill Hire also uses iyarn as a way to check in on career coaches and evaluate their program,

"We can look at the iyarn data and ask career coaches, "How are you helping them build up their scores? We've used the data to ask other team members for specific advice about how to help each individual, and at the end of the day we can look at the data and ask, "Are we doing everything we can?"

iyarn's Inspiration

iyarn founder, Lockie Cooke, was given the once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to live with the Bardi Jawi tribe of the Dampier Peninsular in the Kimberley. Lockie maintained a close connection to the People, Country and Culture and was culturally adopted by the Ejai family to recognise his close bond with the family over the years.

Lockie was intrigued by how connection through storytelling was a huge part of how the Bardi and Jawi people maintained their close bond with each other, their country, and their culture; to ensure individuals remained meaningfully connected and had a purpose.

“The concept of the connection through storytelling became the catalyst and building blocks for iyarn”

Lockie was inspired to develop a tool to help and support others in times of vulnerability; to ensure they had a way to connect; and maintain meaningful connections to their community, support networks, and peers. This tool also needed to track the individual's success to ensure personal and professional growth was achieved over time.
