

Automatically Connect Documents to Digital Workflows

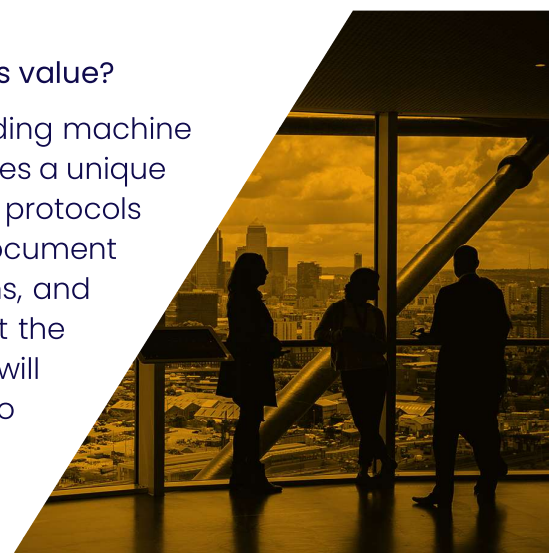

DeskConnect takes all the transactional documents that land on a user's desktop and automatically moves them through your business. It simplifies the capture and redistribution of transactional documents that involve user-level interaction and input.

Businesses generate, receive, and process massive volumes of transactional documents every day. And to maximize revenue as a trading partner, every business wants to accept as many document types and formats as possible. Think of all the work done on desktop applications, by email, using web forms, etc. These soft copy documents are critical to business, they are digital, but they are not actually structured data that is available to your business systems. What if you could quickly and reliably redirect those documents in a way that kept employees focused on their work and not on document review, data entry, document storage, and document retrieval?

So how does DeskConnect turn all that potential into real business value?

We create Connection. Using a combination of technology including machine learning (ML) and artificial intelligence (AI), DeskConnect establishes a unique and exceptional input agent from source systems and transport protocols directly from a user desktop. DeskConnect automates capture document recognition, enables users to modify documents in native systems, and then extracts and classifies the document and content. Now that the document and data are in a shareable format, DeskConnect will distribute the content to multiple destinations, and connects to systems that manage outputs for workflow, storage, retrieval, and reporting.

The role of our software is "Connection" - receive the input, capture the content, and distribute the documents and data across a business to manage for further use and value.

Let's build true CONNECTIONS! All companies conduct business using a combination of electronic, soft, and hard document formats. The FabConnect suite creates "connection" within - and filling the gaps across - all three formats. We do this by leveraging our exceptional print driver technology, which is easy to deploy, easy to adopt, and creates an exceptionally high-quality product for digital transformation.
