In every industry there are visionaries – those businesses that set the pace and become the standard by which all other companies are measured. These are the businesses that have the ability to see opportunities and, more importantly, act on them with confidence. It takes an Enterprise Resource Planning (ERP) infrastructure that is solid, dependable, and flexible enough to handle any situation. It takes an ERP system designed by SimCrest.

When it comes to software solutions for mid-to-large sized companies, SimCrest is the visionary in the industry. We take off-the-shelf ERP systems and modify them so that they function as though they were designed for your company from the very beginning. In all of the millions of lines of code that make up a software solution, there lies a secret code for enhancing your performance. SimCrest finds it and turns it into your code for success.

Modern technology should work for people; not the other way around.

If it isn't broke don't fix it... No other words have been so powerful in keeping businesses from their fullest potential. At SimCrest, we believe there is always room to improve efficiency, increase output, expand reach, boost profits, and build a reputation for excellence. No one should have to settle for just part of what they are capable of – and that applies to ERP software as well.

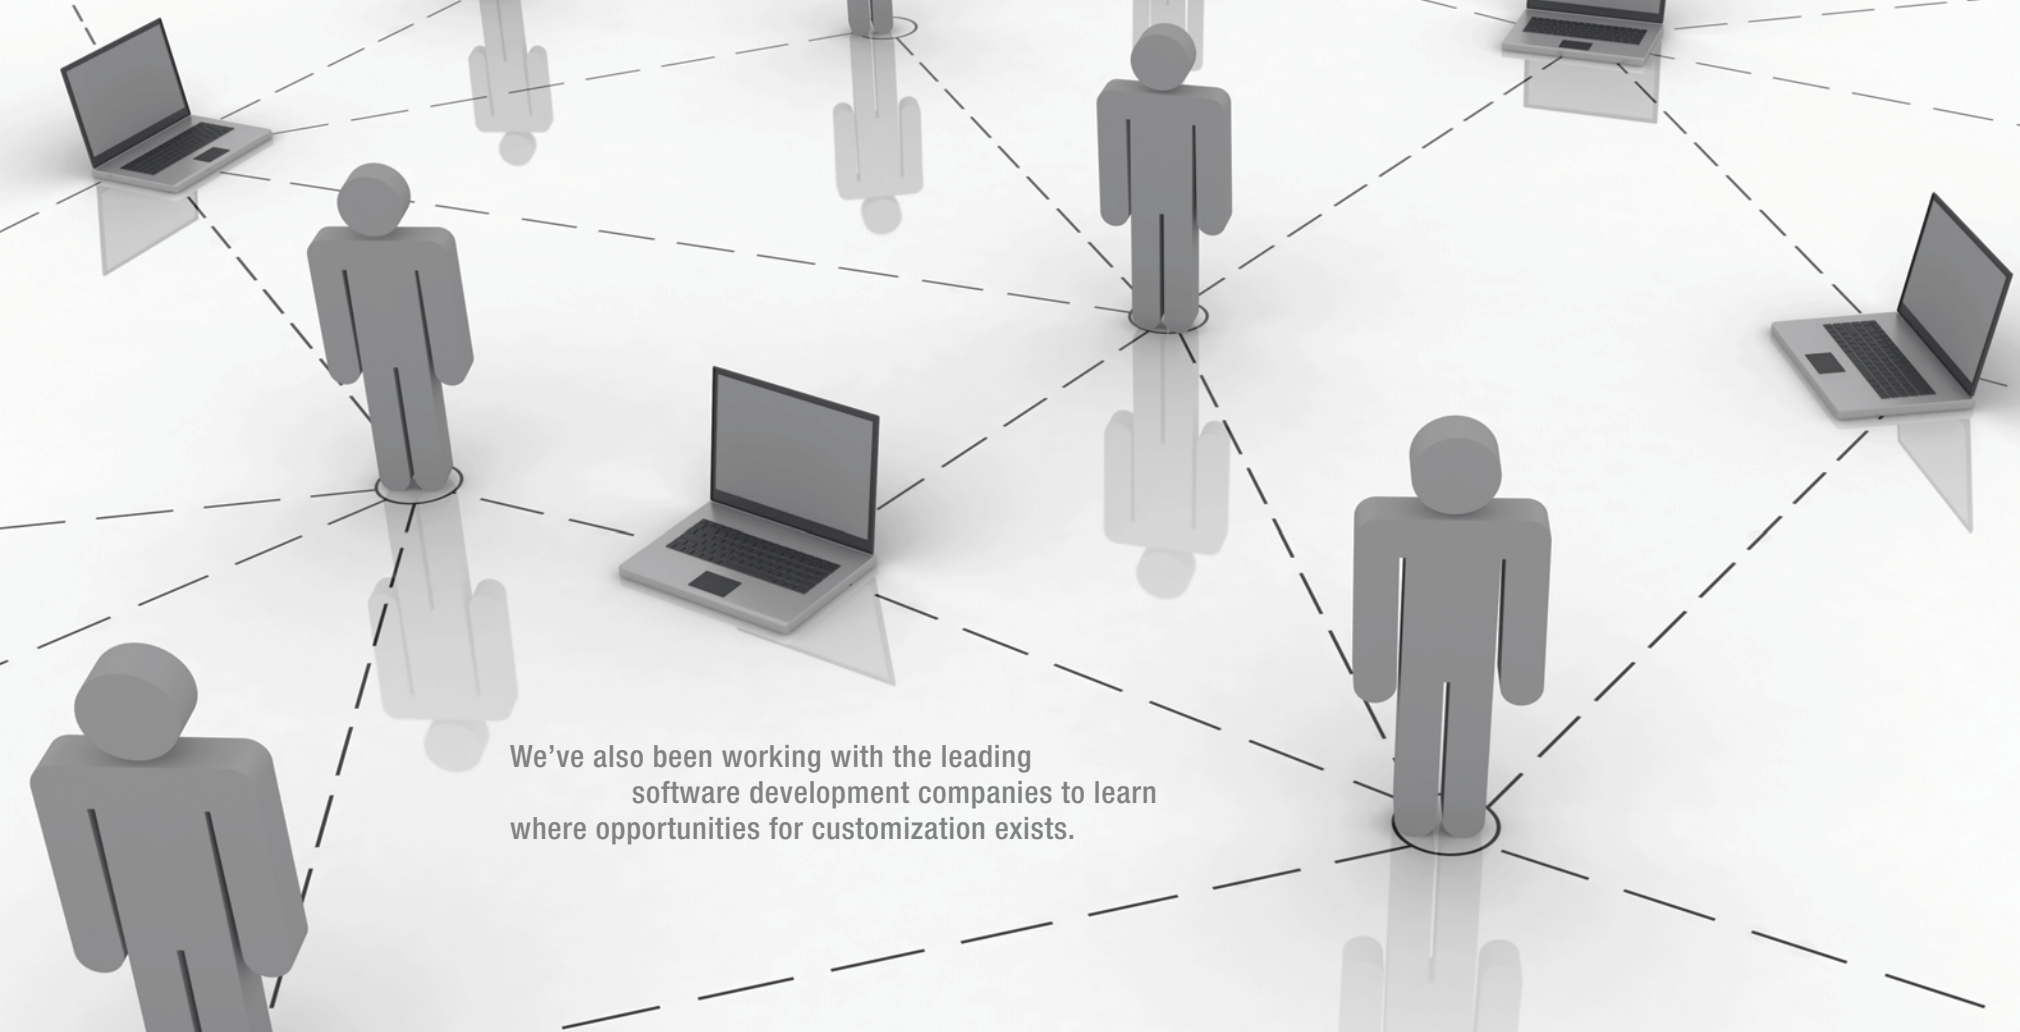

If you want an ERP system that is easy to use, then that's precisely what you should have. If you want to access your company information from anywhere in the world, you should be able to. Your productivity should be enhanced and your decision-making capabilities made easier. If you need a system that's flexible enough to be used with equal efficiency by multiple people, the software should bend to your wishes. And if you want to turn the seemingly impossible into real possibilities, you should push beyond typical, standard solutions and take advantage of a tailor-made approach for increasing return on investment.

The technology exists. Your ambition is there. SimCrest makes it happen.

Drive is how the world measures one's ability to succeed where others haven't even tried.

Before current ERP systems enjoyed the wide-spread popularity they do today, SimCrest was working with businesses to maximize the capabilities of their software systems. We've also been working with the leading software development companies to learn where opportunities for customization exists. It's a journey that's spanned two decades and multiple countries – which equals a world of expertise that SimCrest provides to clients. Our people are some of the most knowledgeable and creative minds in the business, and our hands-on experience with some of the world's most popular ERP and business technology solutions runs deeper than most. In fact, we often have a level of experience that's only comparable to the software providers themselves.

For us, the idea of software customization isn't a hobby or an interest. This is the most important part of a company's business – this is people's livelihoods, and their chance to make impressions in an industry. Only when we help a business achieve all of those things, do we consider our work a success.

The willingness to accept 'the way things are' is what holds us back from 'the way things could be.'

Quite simply, SimCrest represents a company of overlapping expertise that gives us insight into more than just how ERP systems work, but how they should work with businesses.

True expertise isn't hard to identify when you know what to look for. When you look at SimCrest, you'll see a company that has a strong, solid ability to design software to fit the way your company does business and provide:

- Operational advice and guidance
- Efficiency evaluations
- Business Analysis
- Project Management
- Training
- On-going Support

What you'll also see however is a group of people that knows how to take their knowledge and apply it in a different way. It is our ability to do this that takes us beyond providing simple software solutions.

Quite simply, SimCrest represents a company of overlapping expertise. It is the basis of our insight into how ERP systems work, and, more importantly how they should work with businesses.

The human mind is expansive – to stop at just one thing to do well minimizes our talents.

By choosing SimCrest, you're choosing a partner that is committed to helping your business succeed.

The difference between using an ERP system right out of the box and working with SimCrest to develop that ready-made system into a solution tailored to fit your way of doing business goes far beyond the software itself. By choosing SimCrest, you're choosing a partner that is committed to helping your business succeed. That philosophy is not limited to the code that makes up software; it extends to a code of ethics and standards for the way we interact with people.

We welcome your ideas. We want to hear your input. We want to help you understand the possibilities so you may become excited about your business's potential. We want the entire experience to be an open exchange. True, it may be a very different approach than that of most software and technology consultants, but it is precisely what a true custom solutions expert should be able to provide. SimCrest does it every day, and we can do the same for you.

Potential is only valuable when it can be converted to action, and then from action to results.
