POS-Compliance made easy

fiskaltrust.

with the Open Source fiskaltrust.Middleware.

Implementing POS software to comply with legal regulations can be a challenge due to the complexity of the regulations, the need to support multiple markets, and the diversity of business cases. The development effort required to address these challenges can be significant, especially for small or medium-sized enterprises.
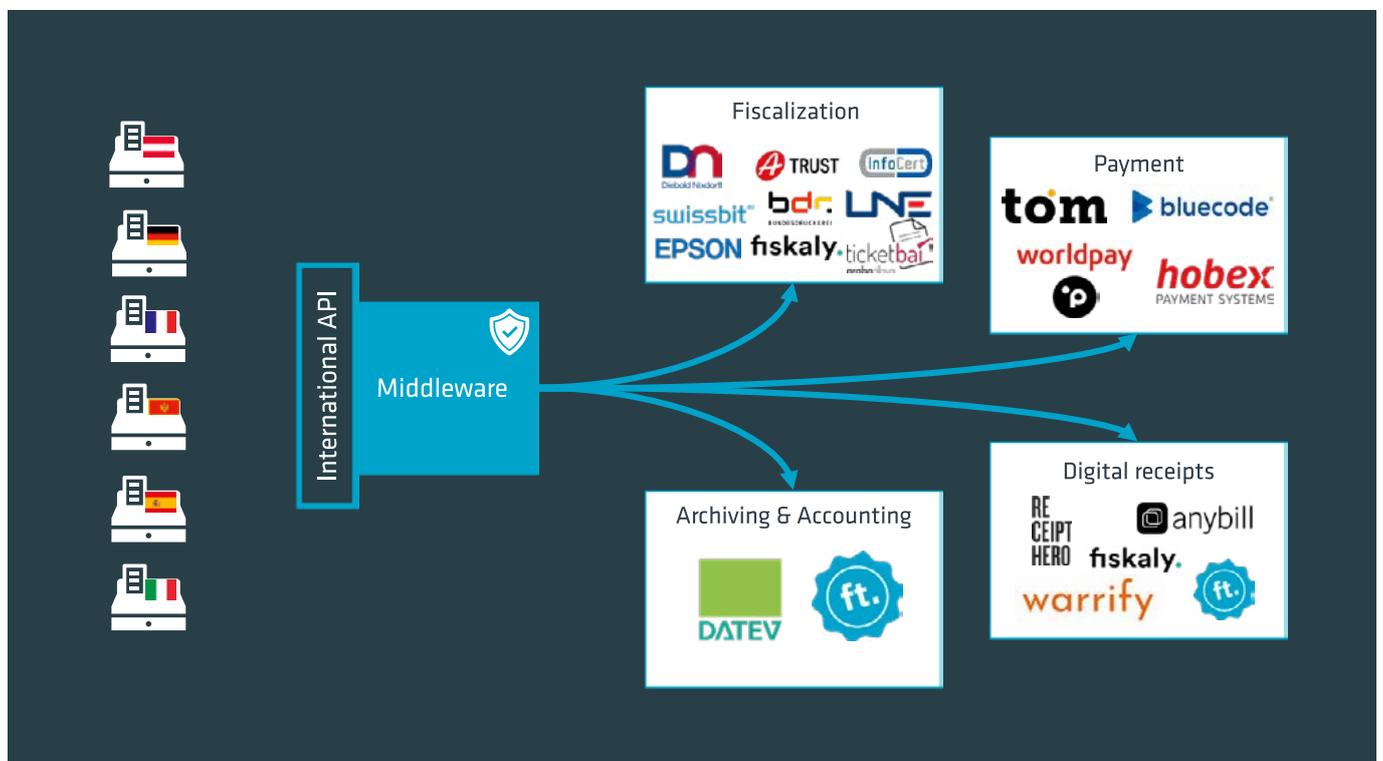

Middleware Solution

Open-source approach

The fiskaltrust.Middleware simplifies the integration of multiple countries and basic functions into POS software. It supports various markets through a direct mapping between the POS system and the middleware, minimizing the need for adjustments. The middleware abstracts the fiscalization and payment logic and provides developers with a clear interface.

The middleware is publicly available on GitHub and can be contributed to by anyone. This approach reflects the values of fiskaltrust: trust, fairness, and openness. We believe that partnering with stakeholders and the community is the best way to achieve mutual benefit and success.

Benefits

The open-source approach has several advantages for businesses and developers. By contributing to the middleware, businesses can help steer the direction of the project and improve its functionality. Developers can use the middleware to simplify compliance efforts and focus on their core business. Additionally, the platform's partner-based approach provides access to a network of over 500 integration partners and 800 trading partners that distribute the middleware to more than 100,000 retail stores and process over 3 million individual receipts daily.

The open-source fiskaltrust.Middleware provides an efficient solution to the challenges of POS compliance. By abstracting common POS functions and supporting multiple markets, the middleware simplifies development efforts and allows businesses to focus on their core operations. The middleware's open-source approach also enables collaboration with stakeholders and the community, bringing benefits to all involved and contributing to their success.
