Human Resources: Supporting a diverse workforce

Lacking the right applications or having to work with disparate systems can be a huge thorn in the side of any employee. So how do we modernize, meet 21st-century expectations and leverage intelligent use of technology?

Good question.

Employee Communication Challenges

Human Resources (HR) is asked to onboard and support employees with ever increasing complexity due to legal and compliance considerations and the proliferation of remote workers. Without the capability to provide centralized, timely and easy to find information creates significant manual effort for HR staff while also negatively impacting employee productivity and satisfaction.

Employee self-service

People are your organization's greatest asset —provided they have all the tools, resources and support they need to be engaged and effective. The right technology can help your employees reach their full potential by streamlining processes and enhancing decision-making.

AdaptivEdge Employee Portal

In our competitive hiring environment, providing a satisfying employee experience is a priority. And because your workers expect you to provide them with the tools they need to be the absolute best at their jobs, let's not stand in the way of productivity.

Let's help them soar.

PEOPLE ARE EVERYTHING

A Portal For All Employees

An employee portal is one of the best ways to use technology to support your workforce. An HR employee portal provides 24-hour access to your organization's benefits, policies and procedures, payroll, training and much more! Employees spend less time hunting for information, and your HR team can focus on more meaningful and strategic work.

A Mobile and Diverse Workforce

Mobile working will account for nearly three-quarters of the total U.S. workforce by 2020. While this new workstyle delivers proven productivity and efficiency benefits, it also creates significant management challenges related to communication, collaboration and security. So how do we address these challenges?

HR FROM THE HEART

Get to the heart of making life and work more streamlined than ever before. We have heart for you and your workforce.
